Captive rearing and breeding technology of anemone fishes

Anemone fishes or clown fishes are the small sized marine ornamental fishes belonging to the family Pomacentridae. The name anemone fish came from its close association with sea anemone and clown fish because of its painted colour, like a clown. Clown fishes fetch high price in the global marine aquarium trade due to its aesthetic value. Captive breeding and seed production technology plays a major role to resolve the green certification criteria. Breeding and seed production of the three species viz. Amphiprion akallopisos, A. percula, and Premnas biaculeatus were standardized. Breeding and seed production of clown fishes have three important components viz, (1) brood stock development (2) the larval rearing and (3) live feed culture. In brood stock development the good quality parent fishes raise up to spawning, in which male and female fishes are selected from a group of clown fishes and fed with shrimp meat/ squid meet/ fish gonads/ clam meat at a rate of 5% of body weight trice a day. In larval rearing the hatchlings are reared up to the advanced juvenile stage (2 to 3cm) for around 45 days. During the larval rearing the juveniles/ larvae are fed with microscopic live feed (rotifers/copepods) according to the mouth size. The live feed culture has two major components such as micro algal culture and zooplankton (rotifer/ copepod culture), and here the zooplanktons are fed with microalgae.

Benefit:

1. Income from a limited area/ space
2. Reduces the impact of wild capture and export
3. Could cater the market demand for tourism based Island economy

Indian Navy's stealth destroyer Mormugao begins her maiden sea sortie; to be commissioned by mid-2022

New Delhi, Dec. 20

Indian Navy conducted the maiden sea trials for Mormugao, the second indigenous stealth destroyer of the P15B class yesterday. Built by Mazagon Dock Shipbuilders Ltd (MDSL), the ship has been named after the port town in Goa. The Mormugao was launched in September 2016 when the late Manohar Parrikar was the Defence Minister.

The Indian Navy plans to commission the stealth destroyer in mid-2022 when it will be known as INS Mormugao. Mormugao will add significantly to the Indian Navy's combat capabilities. The sea trials come less than a month after the recent commissioning of INS Visakhapatnam, the first of the P15B contract. The fourth P75 submarine INS Vela was also commissioned in November and starting sea trials of Mormugao is testimony to the cutting-edge capabilities of MDSL. (Source: india.gov.in)
