New Delhi, Sept. 18 (PIB)

Audit engagements provide a unique opportunity of gaining deep understanding of system and place CAG in a good position of suggesting improvements, said the President of India, Shri Ram Nath Kovind. He was speaking at the valedictory ceremony of the Indian Audit and Accounts Service Officer Trainees of 2018 and 2019 batches at the National Academy of Audit and Accounts in Shimla today.

The President said that past 18 months have been very trying for the country. Economy was badly disrupted due to COVID-19 pandemic. Government has taken various fiscal measures to alleviate distress and for welfare of the poor. These are often financed through money, which may be said to have been borrowed from our children and grandchildren.

We owe it to them that these scarce resources are put to best possible use and are most effectively used for welfare of the poor and needy. CAG has a very important role in this.

The President said that while performing oversight function CAG need to be aware of opportunities of providing inputs for systemic improvements.

Audit engagements provide a unique opportunity of gaining deep understanding of system and place CAG in a good position of suggesting improvements. Governments would take serious note of advice made by an institution like CAG. This would positively impact our public service delivery standards.

The President said that for citizen-convenience, Government processes are increasingly getting digitalized. Fast expanding technology frontier has reduced distance

Cabinet Secretary chairs High Level meet with States/UTs on Public Health Response to COVID-19

New Delhi, Sept. 18 (PIB)

Cabinet Secretary, Shri Rajiv Gauba chaired a high-level meeting to review and discuss the COVID management and response strategy through video conference today, in the presence of Shri Rajesh Bhushan, Union Health Secretary and Dr. V. K. Paul, Member (Health), NITI Aayog. It was attended by the Chief Secretaries, Additional Chief Secretaries (Health), Principal Secretaries (Health), Municipal Commissioners, District Collectors and other senior officials of States and UTs.

Congratulating the States/UTs for the landmark achievement of more than 2.5 Cr vaccine doses administered yesterday, Cabinet Secretary complemented healthcare workers, Chief Medical Officers, District Magistrates and State Health Secretaries for their efforts. He hoped that with increased availability of vaccine doses, the pace of vaccination will be maintained.

He however took the occasion to remind the States that there is no room for complacency. He stressed on the need to strictly enforce COVID Appropriate Behaviour (CAB).

Drawing examples from other countries that saw multiple peaks of COVID-19, he expressed concern over certain pockets in the country reporting high test positivity.

The Union Health Secretary highlighted the emerging challenge of Serotype-II Dengue in 11 States which is associated with more cases and more complications than other forms of the disease.

between State and citizens. Through direct benefit transfer, money can reach the poorest citizen in the most remote corner of the country at the push of a computer button. From audit perspective this is a 'small challenge' and 'huge opportunity'. Using advanced analytics tools, information from large volumes of data can be weaned out without travelling afar. This can make the audit engagements more focused and efficient. Systemic red flags can be raised at an earlier stage. He said that we have to keep pace with evolving technology landscape. He also expressed confidence that CAG is seized of the matter.

Speaking about sylvan surroundings of the National Academy of Audit and Accounts, the President said that such surroundings are a great place for learning pursuits. These surroundings also teach us of a very onerous responsibility of leaving same pristine nature for our future generations to enjoy. Despite India's developmental needs we have undertaken significant responsibility to address global climate change challenge and environmental protection. He noted that CAG has taken measures to build capacities in the area of environmental audit. He said that this is a very welcome step for our future. We must always remember that constraints of resource finiteness can only be partly addressed by human innovation. For the rest sacrifice by our generation is the only recourse. CAG has a big role to play in making us aware of sacrifices we need to make for our future generations.

Addressing the officer trainees, the President said that as public servants they would derive greatest satisfaction in being able to serve the poorest and bring a smile on her face. While performing our Constitutional duty we must always be mindful of this common responsibility assigned to all functionaries. An approach laden with mutual empathy would ensure that we reach our national goals, much faster.

The President said that the independence enshrined in the Constitution is something to be cherished. More importantly, greater values need to be added to it through professionalism and absolute integrity. All young officers need to fully imbibe these qualities as they become forebears of such rich traditions of Audit and Accounts Department.

Virat Kohli announces to step down as Captain of T-20 team after World Cup

Farmers' Corner- A Knowledge Hub

Blood fruit: a potential fruit cum natural colourant

Blood fruit is a perennial, woody climber that grows taking support of large trees in its natural habitat. Plants bear sweetish sour fruits in bunches, which originate directly from the stem. In backyard gardens, it could be grown using large trees such as mango, jackfruit etc. as live standards and hence, does not require additional space for its cultivation. Fruits have dark red, juicy pulp owing to which it is known as blood fruit. Fruit clusters are borne on old wood and are of about 30-45 cm length weighing 1.0-1.5 kg each. As the fruits are collected from wild/semi-wild conditions and sold in local markets at the rate of Rs. 250- 300/- per kg, efforts were made to popularize it as a backyard crop among the island farmers so that the natural populations are conserved. Nursery techniques have been standardized and regenerated seedlings are being provided to various stakeholders to promote the species as a crop. Pulp was found to be a rich source of anthocyanins of which Pelargonidin and Cyanidin were the dominant ones. Use of blood fruit pulp as a natural colourant was also demonstrated.

Benefit: Growing a few liana in the backyards could serve as additional source of income to the farmers besides being a source of nutrients. Further, use of pulp as a natural colourant for beverages could be promoted among the island hoteliers or caterers.

ANIIMS for YOU

Facts related to COVID-19 & Tuberculosis

-Dr.Ankit Das (Intern), ANIIMS

Q. What is Tuberculosis?

Before COVID-19 became a global pandemic, India was dealing with another, much older epidemic Tuberculosis (TB). Tuberculosis (TB) is caused by a bacterium called Mycobacterium tuberculosis. The bacteria usually attack the lungs, but TB bacteria can attack any part of the body such as the kidney, spine, and brain. Not everyone infected with TB bacteria becomes sick.

Q. What is Pulmonary Tuberculosis?

When the tuberculosis bacteria affect the lungs it is known as pulmonary tuberculosis. Pulmonary TB is the most contagious type, but it usually only spreads after prolonged exposure to someone with the illness.

Q. How is TB Spread?

TB germs are put into the air when a person with TB disease of the lungs or throat coughs, sneezes, or speaks. These germs can stay in the air for several hours, depending on the environment. Persons who breathe in the air containing these TB germs can become infected; this is called latent TB infection.

Q. What are the symptoms?

General symptoms of TB:

- Lack of appetite and weight loss
- Evening high temperature
- Night sweats
- extreme tiredness or fatigue

TB that affects the lungs (pulmonary TB):

- A persistent cough that lasts more than 2 weeks and usually brings up phlegm, which may be bloody
- Breathlessness that gradually gets worse

TB outside the lungs:

Less commonly, TB infections develop in areas outside the lungs, such as the small glands that form part of the immune system (the lymph nodes), the bones and joints, the digestive system, the bladder and reproductive system, and the brain and nerves (the nervous system). Symptoms can include:

- persistently swollen glands
- abdominal pain
- pain and loss of movement in an affected bone or joint
- confusion
- a persistent headache
- fits (seizures)

Q. Who all are at risk?

- people living in areas with high rates of TB
- Substance abuse (smoking, alcohol, drugs)
- Immunosuppression like patients on cancer chemotherapy or on prolonged steroid therapy, people with HIV AIDS.
- Malnutrition

Q. What should I do if I have been exposed to someone with TB Disease?

People with TB disease are most likely to spread the germs to people they spend time with every day, such as family members or co-workers. If you have been around someone who has TB disease, and have symptoms as mentioned above for at least 2 weeks you should go to your doctor or your local health department for sputum tests.

Q. How is TB Disease treated?

TB disease can be treated by taking drugs for 6 to 12 months. It is very important that people who have TB disease finish the medicine, and take the drugs exactly as prescribed. If they stop taking the drugs, they can become sick again; if they do not take the drugs correctly, the germs that are still alive may become resistant to those drugs. TB that is resistant to drugs is harder and more expensive to treat.

In some situations, staff of the local health department meets regularly with patients who have TB to watch them take their medications. This is called directly observed therapy (DOT). DOT helps the patient complete treatment in the least amount of time.

Q. What is COVID-19?

COVID-19 is the disease caused by a new corona virus called SARS-CoV-2. WHO first learned of this new virus on 31 December 2019, following a report of a cluster of cases of 'viral pneumonia' in Wuhan, People's Republic of China. Similarities and difference between Tuberculosis and COVID19

	Covid 19	Tuberculosis
Mode of transmission	● Through air or droplet and fomites	● Droplet transmission
Symptoms	● Sore throat, congestion, or runny nose ● Cough, shortness of breath or difficulty breathing ● Fatigue and headache ● Muscle or body aches ● New loss of taste or smell ● Nausea, vomiting, or diarrhoea	● Chills, fever, or night sweats ● Loss of appetite ● Weight loss ● chest pain ● Fatigue

Q. Do COVID 19 And Tuberculosis spread in the same way?

While both tuberculosis (TB) and COVID-19 spread by close contact between people the exact mode of transmission differs, explaining some differences in infection control measures to mitigate the two conditions.

TB bacilli remain suspended in the air in droplet nuclei for several hours after a TB patient coughs, sneezes, shouts, or sings, and people who inhale them can get infected. The size of these droplet nuclei is a key factor determining their infectiousness. Their concentration decreases with ventilation and exposure to direct sunlight.

COVID-19 transmission has primarily been attributed to the direct breathing of droplets expelled by someone with COVID-19 (people may be infectious before clinical features become apparent). Droplets produced by coughing, sneezing, exhaling and speaking may land on objects and surfaces, and contacts can get infected with COVID-19 by touching them and then touching their eyes, nose or mouth . Handwashing, in addition to respiratory precautions, are thus important in the control of COVID-19.

Q. Is COVID19 leading to flare-up of Tuberculosis?

While there is no conclusive evidence yet to establish that COVID-19 can directly trigger an increase in tuberculosis, TB cases have indeed been going up, especially in the post-COVID phase.

Mostly because of delayed diagnosis due to lock down during the pandemic. However, emerging evidence from various studies suggest that COVID and TB dysregulates the immune responses and the possibility of COVID-19 activating dormant/latent TB infection or triggering re-infections in those recovering from COVID is real.

Latent TB can get activated into active TB when body's immune system is weak. Irrational use of steroids can lead to immunosuppression, which heightens the risk of reactivation of dormant infections such as latent TB or opportunistic secondary infections like mucormycosis.

Q. Are people with tuberculosis likely to be at increased risk of COVID 19 infection, illness and death?

- While experience on COVID-19 infection in tuberculosis (TB) patients remains limited, it is anticipated that people ill with both TB and COVID-19 may have poorer treatment outcomes, especially if TB treatment is interrupted.
- Older age, diabetes and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) are linked with more severe COVID-19 and are also risk factors for poor outcomes in TB.
- TB patients should take precautions as advised by health authorities to be protected from COVID-19 and continue their TB treatment as prescribed.
- People ill with COVID-19 and TB show similar symptoms such as cough, fever and difficulty breathing. Both diseases attack primarily the lungs and although both biological agents transmit mainly via close contact, the incubation period from exposure to disease in TB is longer, often with a slow onset.

Q. Is tuberculosis treatment differs in patients who have both TB and COVID 19?

In most cases tuberculosis (TB) treatment is not different in people with or without COVID-19 infection. Experience on joint management of both COVID-19 infection and TB remains limited. However, suspension of TB treatment in COVID-19 patients should be exceptional. TB preventive treatment, treatment for drug-susceptible or drug-resistant TB disease should continue uninterrupted to safeguard the patient's health, reduce transmission and prevent the development of drug-resistance.

While treatment trials are ongoing, no medication is currently recommended for COVID-19 and therefore no cautions on drug-drug interactions are indicated at present. TB patients on treatment should nonetheless be asked if they are taking any medicines, including traditional cures, that may interact with their medication.

Effective treatments to prevent TB and to treat active TB have been scaled up and are in use worldwide. The risk of death in TB patients approaches 50% if left untreated and may be higher in the elderly or in the presence of comorbidity. It is critical that TB services are not disrupted during the COVID-19 response.

Prevention:

Measures must be implemented to limit transmission of TB and COVID-19 in congregate settings and health care facilities. Administrative, environmental and personal protection measures apply to both (e.g. basic infection prevention and control, cough etiquette, patient triage).

Provision of TB preventive treatment should be maintained as much as possible.

Measures to be taken by people with TB to reduce their risk for COVID-19

- Social distancing with "Quarantine": Remain at home and avoid contact with people as much as possible.
- Wash hands frequently with soap and water.
- Don't touch face, nose, eyes with unwashed hands.
- Avoid close contact with those who are unwell.
- Strictly adhere to your TB treatment.
- Avoid hospital visits as much as possible and keep in touch with your doctor/nurse/health facility by phone.
- Use masks, and take extra caution to maintain hygiene such as - disinfection of hands, used surfaces, proper disposal of used tissues, etc.
