World Bank hails India's whole-of-government approach to stimulate production during Corona pandemic

New Delhi, Aug. 31

The World Bank has hailed India's whole-of-government approach to stimulate production during Corona pandemic. It said, India adopted a whole-of-government approach to stimulate local production that helped reduce unit prices and the dependency on global supplies during the COVID-19 pandemic even as no compromises were made on quality in the largest procurement exercise conducted by the Government.

World Bank report takes a close look at the initiatives taken by the Centre to ensure a sustained supply of essential medical commodities during the critical initial phase of the pandemic, including efforts to its efforts to develop the domestic market for essential Covid commodities and lifesaving equipment.

A unique feature in India was the private sector's active role in testing, contributing to nearly 50 percent of the laboratories as well as the venture capital, raising additional resources to support domestic manufacturing of Covid commodities, and develop IT-supported innovations for teleconsultation and
