Jarawa Facts

The Jarawa resisted contact with the growing numbers of Indian settlers on their islands until 1998. Now, they are under serious threat. Poachers are camping for days at a time in their forest, hunting the animals they depend on and bringing disease, violence and exploitation.

Your Nature Guide

The Oceanic Medley: Of the 25 modern phyla of groups of animals, only four are represented on land, and all 25 are represented in the oceans! However, there is one extremely important class of animals that is almost absent here: insects, which are so abundant on land. Why? No one really seems to know. Some scientist think that crustaceans (shrimps, lobsters, and crabs) may occupy in the sea the place that is occupied by the insects of land.

The Sunlight Zone: This zone is the oceans garden where sunlight streams through. Plants grow here, product food through photosynthesis, and supports animals life. This layer where air meets water is home to many species of animals important to us economically and ecologically. Here you find animals in various stages of their life cycles-eggs, larvae, juveniles, and adults.

Fuel price optics

The Centre finally decided last week to relent and act on the advice of monetary policymakers by cutting the excise duty on petrol and diesel by ₹5 and ₹10 a litre, respectively. The duty reduction, announced on the eve of Deepavali, immediately helped lower the retail prices of the two fuels by at least about 5% and 11%, respectively. And on the Government's urging, more than 20 States and Union Territories also reduced the VAT levied on the fuel products, thereby enhancing the relief provided to consumers from record pump prices. While the Centre asserted that the decision was to impart a fillip to the reviving economy, as well as easing inflationary pressure, the political significance of its timing was hard to overlook, coming a day after the ruling BJP suffered electoral reverses in some legislative and parliamentary bypolls. That the Government was keen to make political capital out of its belated reduction of levies was made obvious two days later, when it sought to call out the States — almost all ruled by Opposition parties — that were yet to make commensurate VAT reductions. With a clutch of crucial State elections, including to the prized U.P. Assembly, due early next year, the BJP is keen to regain control of the narrative, especially given the heightened public concern over inflation and the surge in fuel prices.

As far as the economy is concerned, the reduction in fuel bills is bound to have a salutary impact on inflation as diesel is the main fuel for freight carriage and impacts the cost of everything requiring to be transported. The softening in transportation costs ought to provide some cushion to the manufacturing sector, which has had to cope with surging input prices at a time when demand is still tenuous. The additional cash left in the wallets of consumers may also provide a small bump in consumption though the durability of this stimulus will hinge on how global oil prices behave in the coming weeks and months. Global oil prices have been on a boil this year and the World Bank group projected last month that average crude prices would end 2021 with a gain of about 70%. With the Indian crude basket having risen on average almost 62% in the 10 months through October and the historical trend suggesting a firming of prices towards the year-end when the northern hemisphere's winter usually pushes up energy demand, there is a real risk that Indian refiners may be left with little option but to continue raising retail prices. The onus would then be again on the Centre to make further cuts to the duty it had raised last year. States run by other parties should take the cue from Tamil Nadu and Punjab and bring down the prices at the outlets, and not hold back for political or revenue reasons.

Keep The Fizz Going..!

Many authors have a brilliant idea, start a book and soon realize they are not writing anymore! And like those authors or writers, often we are very excited when given a new task, a new project or assignment; we feel great we have been chosen, we also feel we can do a great job of it, and we start off with a bang.

But often it's like opening a soda bottle, initially there's a lot of fizz, and then it's gone.

There is a saying often applied to sporting events that also fits very well with every other endeavor in the workplace: "It is not how you start, but how you finish."

When a new initiative begins, such as rollout of an innovative product, an imaginative marketing strategy, or implementation of new technology, we typically experience high levels of enthusiasm. Expectations are lofty and hopes soar in anticipation of promising outcomes.

However, such peaks of energy and excitement are rarely sustained. It is not unusual for people to become disillusioned, discouraged and fatigued about halfway into a difficult challenge, no matter how worthwhile it may be to pursue. Emotions start to subside and the reality sets in about the hard work and drudgery required to bring a project to its conclusion.

At such times it helps to get matters into a proper perspective; when I start to feel the fatigue, it is important to remind myself that my feelings are not a reliable measure of how things should go. For instance, the Book of Proverbs says, "Like an open city with no defenses is the man with no check on his feelings."

Feelings can soar and feelings can spiral, so we cannot trust in emotions if we are to successfully finish what we have started.

Our feelings come from a variety of sources – past, present and future. But in fact feelings are not always a reflection of reality. Not only that, but life is complex and we must often live with mixed feelings: "Even in laughter the heart may ache, and joy may end in grief" Or as someone said, "Sometimes I laugh to keep from crying."

Feelings act like a ride on a rollercoaster; all ups and downs. They are also like two rails on a railway track. One rail represents good and positive things in life; the other represents the bad and painful elements of our life. We need to recognize a simple truth that we will always encounter good and bad at the same time, that there will always be something good and something bad happening in your life. That we need to move away from emotions and focus on the job at hand, to work past our feelings, and bring discipline into the fulfillment of a goal..!

No roka for Katrina-Vicky?

After a report on an online portal about a roka between love birds Vicky Kaushal and Katrina Kaif at Kabir Khan's house during Diwali, sources close to Katrina are denying that any such ceremony took place. "Nothing of that sort happened," insist the sources.

But the camera tells a different story. A recent picture posted on Instagram by Katrina shows a large rock on her ring finger. She was spotted hugging Vicky for the first time in public, at the screening of Sardar Udham, after rumours of them being together surfaced. Incidentally, the portal also reported that Katrina's mother Suzanne and sister Isabelle were present at the roka, along with close members of Vicky's family — father Sham Kaushal, mother Veena Kaushal and brother Sunny Kaushal. Kabir has been a very good friend of Katrina for many years now. Recently, Alia Bhatt, who is slated to marry Ranbir Kapoor, was seen wearing a ring with the figure 8. The number 8 is incidentally Ranbir's lucky number.

Janhvi Kapoor's shoots are on hold

We hear Janhvi has just begun shooting for her next film Mili, which is the remake of the 2019-Malayalam film Helen. She has also completed shooting for another film, Good Luck Jerry. However, industry sources tell us that Janhvi's most ambitious film was Takht followed by Dostana 2, an out and out commercial film with Kartik Aaryan.

"Now that the entire film is being recast and Karan is busy with Rocky and Rani Ki Prem Kahani, Janhvi's not shooting when she should've been quite busy. While COVID derailed the shooting of Takht, the impasse between Kartik and Dharma Productions led to Dostana 2 being recast. Though Karan will make Takht soon, Janhvi will need to wait to get some good projects," says a source.

That being said, Janhvi is glad she's working on the Helen remake.

"Helen also won two National Awards this year and that's a kind of a shot in the arm Janhvi needs. But after films like Dhadak and Gunjan Saxena, she's also looking for more good films to help her regain lost ground," adds our source.

The Tough Survive!

"I know the journey is tough, but you are tougher than that," says cancer survivor Manisha Koirala. In a post on National Cancer Awareness Day for those who have been battling cancer, she talks of the 'Arduous Journey of Treatment' but also about the feeling of hope.

The actress, who battled cancer a few years ago, has shared some throwback pictures of herself from when she was undergoing treatment for the disease, and writes, "On this National Cancer Awareness Day, I want to wish everyone who is going through this arduous journey of cancer treatment, a lot of love and success. ...I want to pay my respects to those who succumbed to it and celebrate it with those who conquered it. We need to spread the awareness on the disease and all the stories that are filled with hope need to be told and retold. Let's be kind to ourselves and to the world. I pray for everyone's health and wellbeing," she added.

Startups Eye Post-Pandemic 'Tele-Health' Revolution

From mental health apps to a helmet that can shock a patient's brain remotely, startups at this year's Web Summit are betting on a major shift towards "tele-medicine" as the world emerges from the pandemic.

Using technology to treat patients virtually was a major theme at one of the world's largest tech conferences, which returned to Lisbon this week after Covid-19 forced it to move online in 2020.

"These days, most people use their phones for a lot of everyday needs — why shouldn't healthcare be part of this?" said Johannes Schildt, whose company Kry lets patients book on-screen medical appointments.

"The pandemic has accelerated adoption of these new technologies," Schildt told AFP.

Sweden-based Kry, which operates in five European countries, is far from the only app designed to do away with the need to physically visit a doctor.

And not all of these startups focus on physical health. US-based Calmerry is among a growing number of e-counselling companies that offer video sessions with mental health therapists.

Most public healthcare systems offer limited access to such services, or none at all. With subscriptions starting at $42 per week, Calmerry's co-founder Oksana Tolmachova said a key goal was to make therapy more affordable.

Confiding in robots

Other apps are taking a different approach to tackle the explosion in depression and anxiety seen worldwide during the pandemic.

Mental health chatbot Woebot also invites users to discuss their problems, but the replies come from artificial intelligence rather than a human therapist.

While some may be unnerved by the idea of pouring one's heart out to a piece of software, studies suggest that confiding in a virtual human could encourage people to open up.

Woebot's founder Alison Darcy, a clinical research psychologist, said the chatbot avoided the "baggage and social constructs" that come with human interactions — worrying that the other person will judge you, for instance.

And given the dearth of trained therapists compared with the number of people who need help with their mental health, Darcy argued that AI is a valid tool for approaching the problem.

"We need to be throwing everything at helping people get well," she said.

Former Georgia President Saakashvili Moved to Jail Hospital Weeks into Hunger Strike

Tbilisi, Nov. 8: Former Georgian President Mikheil Saakashvili was transferred to a prison hospital on Monday, authorities said, just over five weeks after he declared a hunger strike in jail.

Saakashvili, 53, was arrested on Oct. 1 this year after returning to Georgia on the eve of local elections to rally the opposition, in what he described as a mission to save the country.

He was jailed in the town of Rustavi, south of the capital Tbilisi, where he declared a hunger strike.

He faces six years in prison after being convicted in absentia in 2018 of abusing his office during his rule as president of the former Soviet republic from 2004 to 2013 -charges he rejected as politically motivated.

President Salome Zourabichvili said last week Saakashvili had returned in order to destabilise Georgian politics and that he could never be pardoned.

But she said that given the strong public interest in his case, he must be recognised as a special prisoner and authorities should take all possible measures "so the deterioration of his health is not used for political speculation or destabilisation".

ruin jobs, reservation, and the future of the citizens.

Privatization of government institutions will end permanent employment opportunities for the youth of the country. Now the new education policy is also promoting privatization. In such a situation, where should the poor go, she questioned.

There are also scams coming to the fore in all competitive exams like SSC, NEET, JEE, and not giving jobs to the youth for years clearly shows that the Modi government is anti-student, she explained.

If we are making any policy for the students, it becomes our duty to discuss with it out but it has become the habit of the present government to implement all the work in a dictatorial manner.

The Georgian prison service announced his transfer to hospital on Facebook.

The State President, NSUI Andaman & Nicobar Islands M A Sajid said that ever since the BJP government came to power, fellowships and scholarships of students are being stopped. There are scams in entrance examinations and results of examinations are coming late. Due to which 2 to 3 years of students get wasted.

NSUI has demanded from the central government that at least 2 years relaxation in age limit should be given to the students at the central level and state level for competitive examinations. This is because 2 years of students have been completely wasted during the Corona period.

Significantly, after the loss of the Corona period, students have not yet recovered from the losses and this movement of NSUI has given voice to the demands of the students.

A lawyer for Saakashvili had no immediate comment on his transfer.

As Zika Cases Rise in U.P., Doctors Urge Travel Curbs

With a rise in the number of Zika virus cases in Uttar Pradesh, doctors have advised that people should avoid all non-essential travel to areas reporting cases. Currently close to 90 persons, including 17 children, have tested positive for the virus from the State.

According to information released by the World Health Organisation (WHO), a majority of those infected with Zika virus disease either remain asymptomatic (up to 80%) or show mild symptoms of fever, rash, conjunctivitis, body ache, joint pains. The mosquito that transmits the Zika virus, the Aedes Aegypti, also transmits the dengue virus and is widely prevalent in India.

With no vaccine or drug available to prevent or treat Zika virus disease at present, doctors have said that Zika infections should be suspected in patients reporting with acute onset of fever, maculo-papular rash, among those individuals who travelled to areas with ongoing transmission during the two weeks preceding the onset of illness. Based on the available information of previous outbreaks, severe forms of disease requiring hospitalisation are uncommon and fatalities are rare.

The National Centre for Disease Control (NCDC) had in its previous travel advisory said non-essential travel to the affected areas/ countries should be deferred/ cancelled and pregnant women or women who are trying to become pregnant should defer/ cancel their travel to the affected areas. Encouraging the use of protective measures, especially during day, the NCDC added that persons with comorbid conditions (diabetes, hypertension, chronic respiratory illness, immune disorders etc) should seek advice from the nearest health facility, prior to travel to an affected country.

Delhi Medical Association member Dr. Anil Bansal said, "There is no specific medicine for Zika virus disease and self-medication should be avoided. Also people should avoid using aspirin for treating fever and use paracetamol. Travel to areas that are seeing a rise in Zika cases is best avoided."

The Union Health Ministry has also advised that people should prevent/ control mosquito breeding and for personal protection should use bed-net at home and hospital to prevent mosquito bite so as to interrupt transmission.

On 8 July 2021, a single Zika virus (ZIKV) infection case was laboratory-confirmed in Kerala. Later that same month Maharashtra also reported its first Zika laboratory-confirmed case from Pune district.

Mexico City Grand Prix | Verstappen Wins to Stretch F1 Lead

Red Bull's Max Verstappen celebrated a dominant win in the Mexico City Grand Prix on Sunday to surge 19 points clear of Lewis Hamilton in the Formula One championship with four races remaining.

Seven-times world champion Hamilton was second for Mercedes, holding off Red Bull's Sergio Perez who became the first Mexican to stand on his home podium at a jubilant Autodromo Hermanos Rodriguez.

Red Bull closed the gap to Mercedes in the constructors' standings to one point.

"It's still a long way to go but it's of course looking good, but also it can turn around very quickly," said Verstappen, 24, of his big step forward in the championship battle.

The championship leader seized the lead into the first corner from third on the grid, after going three abreast with the two Mercedes, and gave Hamilton no chance to hit back once an initial safety car period was out of the way.

"I gave it absolutely everything and it was a great fight with Sergio at the end, I was able to at least get second," said Hamilton.

Perez was hoisted high on the shoulders of his mechanics as he waved the Mexican flag to salute the crowd before the podium ceremony.

"Of course I wanted more, I wanted to get a one-two for the team but I didn't have a single chance to get through," he said after his third podium in a row after third places in Texas and Turkey.

Verstappen took the chequered flag 16.555 seconds clear of Hamilton to seal his ninth victory of the season, third in Mexico and 19th of his career.

The safety car was deployed until lap four after a collision at the start between Haas' Mick Schumacher and AlphaTauri's Yuki Tsunoda, while McLaren's Daniel Ricciardo tagged the back of Valtteri Bottas's Mercedes and lost his front wing.

Bottas, who had taken a surprise pole position on Saturday, was spun around and dropped to 18th place after an immediate pitstop.

The Finn ended up 15th but pitted for fresh tyres to snatch the fastest lap from Verstappen at the end, denying the Dutchman a precious bonus point without it coming to Mercedes since he was outside the top 10.

Arsenal Inches Towards Top Four

London, Nov. 8: Arsenal closed in on the Premier League top four after a second-half goal from Emile Smith-Rowe gave it a 1-0 home win over Watford on Sunday in manager Mikael Arteta's 100th league and cup game in charge.

The result lifted Arsenal lifted one place up to fifth on 20 points from 11 games.

Antonio Conte's first Premier League game in charge of Tottenham Hotspur ended in a scrappy 0-0 draw at Everton on Sunday, as a crucial VAR intervention helped it scrape a point.

The pivotal moment in a game of few clear chances came just past the hour mark when referee Chris Kavanagh awarded a penalty against Tottenham keeper Hugo Lloris for a foul on Richarlison but changed his mind after checking the pitchside monitor.

Everton ended a feisty match with 10 men after Mason Holgate was sent off in stoppage time for a wild tackle on Spurs midfielder Pierre-Emile Hojberg.
