Rangalal demands for setting up of BSNL Tower at Shyamkund Village

Port Blair, Jan 27: The Andaman & Nicobar Territorial Congress Committee President Mr. Rangalal Halder on Thursday wrote a letter to the Chief General Manager, BSNL and requested him to install a BSNL Tower at Shyamkund Village, Bakultala Panchayat. In the letter, Mr. Halder highlighted the CGM about the plight of Shyamkund, Ulidara and Bagaon villagers. He said that, there is no network facility in these villages since past 30 years. He added that, these villagers were settled under the colonization schemes of Government of India in the year 1954 and generation after generation passed away but till date the villagers are suffering due to unavailability of BSNL Tower. He mentioned that, more than 500 peoples are residing in these villages and they have never used mobile

MP demands 'Line-Boat' between Port Blair and Rangat via Shaheed Dweep, Swaraj Dweep and Long Island, twice a week

Port Blair, Jan 27: The Member of Parliament of Andaman and Nicobar Islands, Mr. Kuldeep Rai Sharma has requested the Hon'ble Lt. Gov. of Andaman and Nicobar Islands to direct the concerned departments to resume 'Line-Boat' between Port Blair and Rangat via Shaheed Dweep, Swaraj Dweep and Long Island, twice a week. In a letter addressed to the Lt. Governor the Member of Parliament today mentioned that during his recent visit to North and Middle Andaman and also during his present visit to Shaheed and Swaraj Dweep, he has been approached by a large number of Islanders, who are suffering heavily since last many months due to withdrawal of the 'Line Boat', which used to go to Rangat from Port Blair via Shaheed Dweep, Swaraj Dweep and Long Island. He added that before lockdown a ferry used to connect all these islands and hence previously people from these islands were able to travel from one island to the other, within a few hours and with minimum expenditure. The Member of Parliament pointed out that now in absence of the said ferry service people of remote islands have to come to Port Blair first, halt at Port Blair for Bus/ferry tickets and then travel to other islands, which cost more than Rs 2000 to Rs. 2500 per head. He mentioned that due

Leh violence

One person was killed, and four others were injured when police opened fire to disperse a mob at Leh. The mob set fire to seven government buildings and government vehicles, according to an official report. The state Deputy Minister for Protocol, Sonam Wangchuk, who was negotiating with the agitators in the town had a narrow escape when the mob attacked him. According to the Divisional Commissioner of Kashmir G. N. Naik, about 3,000 people gathered in Leh and indulged in snow throwing at the police and the Central Reserve Police Force. The buildings the mob set on fire include the employment exchange, district information centre and the Central Reserve Police Force. The agitation was led by Congress (I) MP, Namgyal.

State governments will have to take a hard decision on a steep rise in power tariffs, if flow of funds from the World Bank for this sector is to continue. The World Bank has made it clear to the Indian government during recent discussions that the state electricity boards must be in a position to meet at least 20 per cent of their investment requirement through internal resource generation. This is a major deviation from its earlier stand that it would be enough if the boards were able to earn a 9.5 per cent return. The Maharashtra Chief Minister Baba Saheb Bhosale said that the Congress (I) president Indira Gandhi had cleared his list of 15 or 16 persons for forming a ministry in the state. Bhosale said he met Mrs. Indira Gandhi for about an hour and discussed in detail with her the composition of the list of ministers. Bhosale said he accorded priority to ministers from Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes and minority communities.

THE RISKS AND POTENTIAL OF CENTRAL BANK DIGITAL CURRENCIES

The Burning Question is a column that tackles some of the biggest questions in the intersection of science, technology, geopolitics and culture that shape the world as we know it. The column will soon be expanded into a new letter, and you can subscribe here. Subscribers will receive updates via email, Telegram. Central Bank Digital Currencies (CBDCs), or digital tokens of sovereign currencies, are among the hottest topics in the world of finance today. A 2021 BIS survey found that over 86 per cent of central banks in the world were actively researching CBDCs, and 14 per cent were even deploying pilot versions.

India, too, is very cognisant of the change, with the finance ministry confirming that it has taken a proposal from the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) to improve the scope of the definition of banknotes to include currency in digital form. In his book Future of Money, Eswar Prasad, the Tolani Senior Professor of Trade Policy at Cornell University, explores the positives and negatives of CBDCs. Edited excerpts from a conversation:

1. For the end user, what would be the utility of a CBDC at the present moment?

This is the fundamental question for every Central Bank mulling CBDCs. What is the use case relative to physical cash? Many Central Banks are recognising that, given decreasing levels of cash in the economy, issuing CBDCs can keep Central Bank money relevant at the retail level. From a user perspective, private players have commercial objectives to provide fast, efficient and cheap digital payments. Certainly there is competition in the space, with network effects in play that make the market less contestable. So, a CBDC, if properly designed, can promote private sector innovation in payments. For instance, if we have CBDCs in the form of digital tokens distributed by commercial banks or other payment providers who can then innovate on top of that, a variety of things can be accomplished. First, we make it easier for the masses to get access. Then, we can make an infrastructure on top of which the private sector can innovate. In many countries, there are potential impediments to digital payments. In the US, you need to have bank accounts, credit and debit cards. In China, token providers dominate, with little space for anyone else. India has been more far-sighted, the United Payments Interface (UPI) providing government-supported infrastructure on top of which the private players can innovate. For India, the use case for CBDCs might be weaker. Even then, bringing more people into the financial sector, promoting online payments and private sector innovation are all objectives that can be furthered by CBDCs.

2. What are the design possibilities for CBDCs? Is it absolutely necessary that decentralised ledger technologies come into play?

At a basic level, retail CBDCs can take two forms. There is the very simple value-based option of mobile phone apps where you can just transfer money and use them. A lot of Latin American countries use it, but it is not a versatile form of CBDC. It limits functionality and it is not scalable. Account-based CBDCs hold a lot more promise. Each person in an economy would have access to a Central Bank wallet or an account. There are benefits and risks to this. This is applicable even in emerging market countries in a time of financial turmoil. Second, there is a risk that you limit financial sector innovation. This is not a good outcome, where the Central Bank starts playing a larger role in economy, in terms of credit management, payments and so on. However, there are technical solutions to all this. Countries like China have set up dual-layer systems where digital wallets are not managed by the Central Bank, but by frontline operators like commercial banks. This dual-layer system is considered the most advantageous. India can learn a lot from the trials happening in other countries.

3. You mentioned bank disintermediation as a possible threat. Does that translate well into an Indian context, where trust in banking system is now here near as eroded as their Western counterparts?

In India, the banking sector has certain problems, but there seems to be a certain amount of confidence in the public sector banks. But, even in countries with deposit insurance, if you can carry an account directly with the Central Bank, or a government agency, that is likely to be trusted more. This might become more important at a time of financial crisis. People might think: Yes, my bank account is safe, but what is safer than a Central Bank account? They might want to move their money there, and that sort of thinking can create the very financial instability that a CBDC is trying to avoid.

4. CBDCs can also mean the rise of programmable money. What are certain manoeuvres the Central Bank can perform with the help of CBDCs?

Certainly, smart money can raise a whole range of opportunities—economic and monetary policy-wise. However, it is a somewhat risky road to go down. For example, if you have money with expiration tags, you could end up in a situation where different units of Central Bank money start trading for different amounts. An even more dystopian situation would be if a government starts using money to achieve not just economic but social objectives. That in my view raises a set of concerns at a societal level. CBDCs can be used to target objectives—what economists call helicopter drops (instant targeted money transfer) is one such objective. But the flipside should give one pause.

5. How can a Central Bank incentivise CBDC adoption, while aligning the incentives correctly so as to protect existing capital flow regulations like banks?

Design choices will be very important for India. The Central Bank should make sure that the CBDCs do not undercut existing financial institutions or private sector innovation. Given these concerns, I can see CBDCs in such a form that they are interoperable.

6. Will CBDCs affect crypto currencies? If so, how?

Bitcoin has not lived up to its original promise of becoming a medium of exchange without Central Banks' or states' interference. It has proven to be slow, expensive and volatile in prices. What BTC has done is create technology with a lot of possibilities. Even crypto currencies that can transact and settle face the issue of unstable values. That is where the new generation of stablecoins, utilising Bitcoin's underlying technology, but maintaining a stable value backed by reserves of fiat currency, come into play. Facebook's Diem for instance is backed by the US Dollar. Access to low-cost payments and cross-border issues need to be addressed. CBDCs could become more reliable, cheaper, and that could undercut the base use case for crypto stablecoins.

Air India handed over to Tata Group, Maharaja comes home after 69 years

The 3rd brand in the Tata's stable: it holds a majority share in Air Asia India & Vistara

Port Blair, 27th Jan, 2022: The Indian government handed over Air India to the Tata Group on January 27, nearly 69 years after it was taken from the conglomerate. The transaction covers three entities—Air India, Air India Express and AI SATS. Air India is the flag carrier and premier full-service airline. Air India Express is a low-cost carrier.

On this occasion, Mr. N. Chandrababhan, Chairman, Tata Sons Pvt. Ltd. said, "We are excited to have Air India back in the Tata Group and are committed to making this a world-class airline. I warmly welcome all the employees of Air India, to our Group, and look forward to working together." Mr. Ratan N. Tata joined Mr. N. Chandrababhan in expressing his thankful recognition to the Government of India and its various departments for the successful completion of this important transaction.

Three days after Air India's sale was announced on October 8 last year, a Letter of Intent (LoI) was issued to the Tata Group confirming the government's willingness to sell its 100 per cent stake in the airline. On October 25, the Centre signed the share purchase agreement (SPA) for this deal. Three days after Air India's sale was announced on October 8 last year, a Letter of Intent (LoI) was issued to the Tata Group confirming the government's willingness to sell its 100 per cent stake in the airline. On October 25, the Centre signed the

DCGI grants conditional market approval for Covishield, Covaxin for use in adult population

New Delhi, 27th Jan, 2022: Covaxin and Covishield will now be available in the regular market as the Drug Controller General of India has given conditional market approval to these two Covid vaccines on Thursday. The subject expert committee of the Central Drug Standard Control Organisation has earlier recommended granting regular market approval to these Covid-19 vaccines for the adult population, subject to certain conditions. Market approval, however, does not mean that the vaccines will be available in medical shops. People will have to buy Covishield and Covaxin from hospitals and clinics.

Vaccination data has to be submitted to DCGI every six months. Data will have to be updated on COWIN app also. Earlier, it was reported that the Centre was planning to cap the price of the vaccines at ₹275 per dose. The approval has been granted under the New Drugs and Clinical Trials Rules, 2019. The firms, in this case, Bharat Biotech (Covaxin) and Serum Institute of India (Covishield), shall submit data of ongoing clinical trials. All vaccination data will be recorded on the COWIN platform. The approval is only for adult population. Adverse events following immunisation will continue to be monitored as part of the conditions.

In an application sent to the DCGI, V. Krishna Mohan, whole-time director at the Hyderabad-based Bharat Biotech, submitted complete information regarding chemistry, manufacturing and controls, along with the pre-clinical and clinical data while seeking regular market authorisation for Covaxin.

Covaxin and Covishield were granted Emergency Use Authorisation (EUA) on January 3.

Rangalal visits Ayush Medical, distributed sweets, fruits among patients

Port Blair, Jan 27: The 73rd Republic Day was celebrated across the islands by Congress party on Wednesday through various programs with immense euphoria and merriment. As part of this, the Andaman & Nicobar Territorial Congress Committee President Mr. Rangalal Halder visited Ayush Medical, Janglital to enquire about health conditions of various patients admitted there. He distributed food items including fresh fruits and sweets

Bairagi takes up issue of delay in issuance of Kissan Credit Card with CS

Port Blair, Jan 27: Bharatiya Janata Party, State President Shri Ajay Bairagi wrote to Chief Secretary regarding delay in issuance of Kissan Credit Cards to farmers. In his letter he wrote that in his recent visit to North and Middle Andaman a group of farmers raised this important issue of delay in issuance of Kissan Credit Card. He mentioned that more than 300 Farmers have filled the form and submitted with Agriculture Department but of no use as the farmers are still waiting for their credit cards more or less this is the same conditions across Islands. He further stated that on enquiry it was found that Credit Cards are ready and with the bank, which fails to make sense that why card are being held and not distributed. This clears that Officers do not want the benefit provided by Mananiya Narendra Modi Ji led government to reach till the farmers. The credit cards gives the needed farmers benefit of almost 3 lakh rupees hence he requested Chief Secretary to kindly direct head of respective departments to issue Kissan Credit Cards at the earliest.

Government of India Ministry of New and Renewable Energy

Advisory on PM-KUSUM Scheme

Ministry of New and Renewable Energy (MNRE) is implementing the Pradhan Mantri Urja Suraksha evam Utthaan Mahabhiyaan (PM-KUSUM) Scheme, under which subsidy is provided for setting up of standalone solar pumps and for the solarization of agricultural pumps. Farmers can also install grid-connected solar power plants up to 2 MW. The scheme is being implemented by the designated departments of the state governments and the details of all such designated departments are available on the MNRE website www.mnre.gov.in.

It has been observed that some fraudulent websites, falsely claiming to be the registration portal for the PM-KUSUM scheme, are collecting money and information from the people interested in the Scheme. MNRE has issued public notices in the past, advising general public not to deposit any registration fee or share any personal information on such websites. On receipt of complaints, action has also been taken against miscreants and several fake registration portals have been blocked.

In addition to fake websites, WhatsApp and other means are also being used to mislead potential beneficiaries. It is, therefore, strongly advised that people interested in PM-KUSUM Scheme should check the authenticity of the website before providing any information. It is also advised not to click on any unverified or suspicious link received through Whatsapp/ SMS which claim to be registration portal for the PM-KUSUM scheme.

Only websites of MNRE and those of agencies of the State Governments should be accessed for registration and information on Scheme. For information regarding eligibility for participation in the scheme and implementation process, please visit the MNRE website <http://www.mnre.gov.in>, PM-KUSUM central portal: <https://pmkusum.mnre.gov.in> or dial toll-free number 1800-180-3333.
