control, behavior and communication skills. With the introduction of patient feedback system in the hospital premises, patients are also encouraged to share their negative and positive experiences while in hospital with an intention to improve the standards of care.

GBPH, being the only health care facility in the Islands providing specialist and super-specialist services, has a huge load of patients on daily basis. An e initiative of scan and share has already been introduced for the patients to register into the facility online from their homes, skipping the registration queues using ABHA app, downloading it from google playstore. Soon, GBPH also intends to introduce a token system that will enable patients to take over-the- counter appointment, significantly reducing overcrowding in the waiting areas of the hospital. Patients will then be given unique token upon arrival, with display of their token numbers available at the respective OPDs enabling them to check on their position in the queue and receive timely updates on their appointment status. This initiative will enhance the operational efficiency and contribute to an overall positive patient experience in the hospital premises.

ANIIMS continues to strive hard and remain committed to high ethics, transparent communication and continuous health care improvement for the benefit of patients. These measures underscore the dedication of the institution to provide quality healthcare services. Valued feedback from patients and attendants is being used as an essential tool for shaping up the ongoing improvements in service delivery, a press release from the Director, ANIIMS said.
